Bio

In my late high school years, various questions about life led me to search for answers on the internet. By God's grace, I read about the unconditional love of God through the sacrifice of Jesus on different websites, and I received Jesus as my Saviour in front of the computer. It was through my involvement with Power to Change in university where I grew to understand the importance of sharing my faith. In 2008, on my first short-term mission trip to North Africa, God gave me a heavy burden to bring the Gospel to the Muslim world. In 2013, I served in Turkey for one year, where God affirmed His call for me to serve in global ministries. To become better equipped, I came home and studied Intercultural Ministries at Ambrose and served at North Richmond Alliance Church for two years. Now I am appointed to serve in Central Asia.
